Facts

- This building was developed by and is still the prized possession of the government of the small Pacific island of Nauru.
- Melbourne's tallest building from 1977 to 1980.
- Height increased by 7 meters in 2001 with the addition of a mechanical penthouse.
- Reclad in aluminum in 1992 after pieces of the concrete facade started falling off.
- Plans have been approved for the redevelopment of the forecourt of Nauru House consisting of a glassed in atrium with roof top garden at the base of the tower fronting Exhibition Street, an 15 storey office tower at 76-80 Collins Street and a 7 storey mixed use tower at 84 Collins Street.
- To make way for the development of Nauru House in the 1970s, two buildings with high heritage values were demolished on Collins Street, amid much public outcry, to provide the tower with a Collins Street adress. The proposed redevelopment will reinstate the built edge to Collins Street by filling in these two gaps.
