monument dedicated to Mikhail V. Lomonosov (1711-1765; University founder) in the internal court.

- The 1980 Moscow Olympic Games logo was designed with the inspiration of the building.
- The star surrounded by ears of wheat at the top of the spire weighs an incredible 12 tons, and is 9 meters in diameter.
- The city's tallest for just over 50 years until surpassed by Triumph-Palace.
- The University in its entirety covers more than 1.6 square kilometers.
- The university boasts more than 30,000 students.
- The building was partially renovated in 2000.
- This is the largest and most significant of the Vysotniye Zdaniya.
- It's situated on top of a hill 75 meters above the level of the Moskva River.
- It is said, but not confirmed, to have a secret metro station somewhere in the basement.
- On 21st April, 2006, a fire broke out in a dormitory section on the 12th floor killing two people, injuring four and resulting in the evacuation of around 1,500 people.
- The most famous skyscraper in Russia, this tower is almost as notable to Russians across the country as the Empire State Building is to Americans.
- This was the tallest building in Europe until 1988, when it was surpassed by MesseTurm. Today it is still one of Europe's tallest.
- Founded on January 12th, 1755, Moscow University is the oldest Russian university. In 1940 on the occasion of its 185th Anniversary, Moscow University was officially named after M.V. Lomonosov.
- The massive building consists of the central tower, followed by its two 18-storey high lateral wings that slope down to the arms of 8 stories each. The wings are crowned by a clock, a barometer, and a thermometer, all were the world's largest at completion.
- Included in the building is a large 1500-seat auditorium, 19 conference rooms, 140 classrooms, 6000 student rooms, a student club, a library, numerous scientific laboratories, an agronomy museum, a swimming pool, and various gymnastic halls.
- Cumulative length of the 67 elevator shafts inside the building is roughly 6.5 kilometers.
- The building is the world's tallest dedicated educational establishment and surpassed Cathedral of Learning.
