Facts

- The flat crown was once a prominent building feature, but is now just an exposed cooling tower.
- There is a dramatic contrast between plinth and shaft.
- Inside, the lobby is almost shorn of ornaments.
- The walls inside consist of pink-gray matched marble with little trim, under recessed lights.
- The only historicist touch is a pair of griffins that support the lobby clock.
- This was designed by the same architects who did the Empire State Building, in the same year, and on an equally prominent site.
