- This was the first building in Indianapolis to rise higher than the Soldiers & Sailors Monument.
- Ground was broken on February 1, 1960; the cornerstone was laid on December 21, 1960, and first occupancy occurred on January 2, 1962.
- Many city government functions moved here from the Old Indianapolis City Hall, and the previous Marion County Courthouse that stood on the same block just to the south was eventually demolished.
- This is the tallest building in Indianapolis completed during the 1960s.
- The building is on the north side of the block, set back from Washington Street. This open plaza was the site of the original Marion County Courthouse, demolished after this building was completed.
