Facts

- Opponents of the building worried that the construction of the building would scare off the nesting Bald Eagles only about 800 feet away and feared that the high-rise would limit the public's access to Wiggins Pass.
- The luxury high-rise's proposal was rejected by Collier County Commissioners on February 10, 2004 in front of an audience of nearly 250 supporters and opponents from the area.
- Some supported the building's construction, stating that a residential high-rise would be better than having the site rezoned for commercial development.
- The luxury residential high-rise condominium would have replaced the Wiggins Pass Marina, which is a ten-acre site.
- The luxury high-rise condominium was proposed to be built at the northwest corner of Wiggins Pass and Vanderbilt Drive.
